No room? How to create the feeling of more space

1 ______

The first thing you need to think about is your possessions: what you own and what you need. Have a serious clear-out and get rid of things you don’t need. You might find that difficult to do at first, but you should only keep the essentials such as the important pieces of furniture and things you use every day. If you’re serious about making your space work for you, it’s a good opportunity to let go of any excess stuff which you may have accumulated and which clutters your house. Not only will you clear your home, you’ll find it clears your mind too.

2 ______

Light is also extremely important to make your home feel more spacious. Natural light is best, but if that’s not possible, think creatively about how you can get other light into a room too – reflected light from a mirror, light from an extra window, and using light or white paint on the walls. All white may sound incredibly dull, but dark colours on walls can make a space feel smaller.

3 ______

A popular solution to creating the feeling of more space is to remove interior walls and make an open-plan living space. For example, removing the walls between a living room and a dining room can make the space feel more than twice as big. If you do this, make sure you create different areas: a living area and a dining area, rather than leaving it as one big space. What’s good about this solution is that you have the impression of more space, but you still have distinct ‘zones’.

4 ______

A more dramatic change is to dig out your floor. Yes, you can drop your floor level to make the room seem bigger. This is certainly more work and you’d need to get the work done by a trained professional, but if you want that sense of space, it might be an option – provided the room is on the ground floor of course!

2 Read the blog again and answer the questions.

1 Which two ideas would need professional builders to do the work?

__________________________________________________________________________

2 Which idea might help you to think more clearly?

__________________________________________________________________________

3 How many ways does the blog mention that you can create more light in your home?

__________________________________________________________________________

4 Which two internal structures in your home does the blog suggest you could make changes to?

__________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________

6 Which idea would be the cheapest to carry out?

__________________________________________________________________________
3 Which of the ideas do you think are the most helpful?

4 Read the writing task and answer the questions.

Write a similar blog. Think of a place where you study or work. Describe three ideas for how you could make improvements to that place to help you and others study or work better.

1 Where are you going to write about?

2 What three ideas are you going to suggest?

3 Which of these will you do? Tick (✓) the boxes.
   - organise your work into paragraphs
   - use headings
   - use a formal style
   - use an informal style
   - include some specific examples
   - include details of who could do the work and how much it would cost

5 Write the task presented in Exercise 4.
