Beach Conservation Holiday in Wales

Volunteers wanted for a major beach operation organised by Green Beaches UK. We have arranged to spend the summer going round the coast of Wales, cleaning beaches and recording information about the wildlife there. We invite you to join us for a week, a month or even the whole three months!

We have campsites ready, but you'll need a tent. We also have to charge £25 per week for the three meals a day we provide – but that's all you'll pay! Our base office is in Cardiff, and if you get a train or coach there, we'll take you to the sites in a van.

You'll spend each day on the beautiful beaches of Wales, cleaning up rubbish, repairing walls and footpaths, and counting bird and plant numbers. No experience necessary – beginners are welcome and training is provided.

Green Tropics Eco-Hotel

Enjoy the luxury of an exotic holiday on a tropical island without the guilt of destroying the planet. Our four-star hotel produces all its own electricity and recycles 90% of its water for use in the gardens. In addition, all the fruit and vegetables you will eat during your stay are grown on our farm and the eggs, milk and meat all come from our animals.

For just £500 a week, enjoy a luxury room with a view of the beach. Relax by the pool, walk in the tree-covered hills or swim in the crystal sea confident that your stay has done no harm to the local or global environment. We are also the closest tropical island to the UK, so planes burn less fuel getting here.

Please note that there has been no new activity since the earthquake two years ago. Also, the World Health Organisation has recently announced that malaria is the only disease for travellers to worry about here and all you need to do to protect yourself is take a course of anti-malaria pills.
