Obligation

Use had to to express obligation in the past. It is the past of must (for obligation) and have to: I had to wear a uniform when I was a waiter.

Necessity

Use needed to + infinitive to say that it was necessary to do something: I needed to move house because I got a new job in another city.

Use needn't have + past participle to say that a past action turned out not to be necessary: We needn't have printed a map. I have it on my phone.

Use didn't need to or didn't have to to say that something wasn't necessary whether we did it or not: I didn't need to invite her because she's away that weekend.

Speculation

Use must/might/may/could/can't + have + past participle to speculate about past events.

- must have means you feel certain that something happened or was true: They must have received their exam results by now.
- may, might, could means you think it's possible something happened or was true: They might have gone out for the evening.
- may not / might not have means you think it's possible something didn't happen / wasn't true: He may not have left yet.

- can't have / couldn't have means you feel certain that something didn't happen: We can't have missed the train. It's only three o'clock and it leaves at three-fifteen.

Notice that the opposite of must have done for speculation is can't / couldn't have done.

Use must have and can't have when we know or believe something by logical deductions: Her car is outside the house so she can't have left.

Advisability

Use should have or ought to have + past participle to talk about the correct, advisable or morally right thing to do in a past situation. It is often used to express regret about our own actions or criticism of other people's:

I should have bought the newer version. (= but I didn't)

Other uses of past modals

Use might have and could have + past participle to criticise people for not doing things. Might, used in this way, is more formal than could: You could have tidied up your rooms!

You might have called me. I was so worried.

We can also use should have + past participle to talk about something that we expect to have happened: We sent the package last week. It should have arrived by now.
